

Interjections and Direct Address

Interjections and direct addresses are elements that are not necessarily required to make meaning; however, they do add a touch of style that indicates a certain tone. You should use these types of elements sparingly.

Interjections:

Holy cow, he lost the bet.

Good grief, you handled that well.

Direct Address:

You, my friend, are out of your mind.

Remember, students, the final is tomorrow.